wall. She felt tightness in her low back at that point, but continued to work. A few working days later, she was working in a different area and was doing repetitive bending and stooping when she had a worse pain in her low back, which she described as being like "lightening". She continued to work, but later went to an emergency room and was taken off work for several days. She later went to her company doctor, who sent her back to work after an injection. She then began treatment with . EMG was borderline for a mild radiculopathy of the lumbar spine. The patient has been treated with extensive chiropractic care and physical medicine since April of 2002.

REQUESTED SERVICE

A 30-session chronic pain management program is requested for this patient.

DECISION

The reviewer agrees with the prior adverse determination

BASIS FOR THE DECISION

While there is some documentation to show that the patient has an ongoing problem, it is unclear as to how a CPM program would address this patient's needs. Simply being depressed is not enough. The patient has had extremely extensive care and by the treating doctor's own notes, she indicate that an extensive program such as Chronic Pain Management would be of benefit to this patient's condition. As a result, the program is found to not be reasonable or necessary in this case.
